Announcement of Full PhD Students Scholarships:

Graduate School on External Costs in the transport sector (Distributional Effects, Internalisation, Acceptance Aspects)

Within the framework of a graduate school established in cooperation between the Heinrich-Böll-Stiftung and the Technische Universität Dresden, "Friedrich List" Faculty of Transport and Traffic Science, scholarships are available for PhD students.

The scientific purpose of the Graduate School is the investigation of external costs (e. g. distributional effects) and internalisation strategies including acceptance aspects. A detailed description of possible research subjects can be found on the web presence of the Heinrich Böll Stiftung: <http://www.boell.de/stipendien/promotionsfoerderung-6670.html> (in German).

All dissertation projects shall include an interdisciplinary perspective and are open for students of all fields of studies (including traffic science, economics, social sciences, psychology, geo and environmental sciences etc.). Good German language skills are a prerequisite. The TU Dresden offers a scientific supporting program, work stations and IT-equipment. Additionally, the Heinrich Böll Stiftung offers a supporting program focussing on sociopolitical and environmental questions.

The monthly grant is 1.150,- €. Additionally, family/childcare bonuses can be offered. The application deadline is 1 September 2009, the graduate school is planned for 3 years, starting 1 January 2010.
